GLOUCESTER HOUSE TRAGEDY.

Collapse of a Derrick Takes Toll.

WHERE WAS THE AMBULANCE?

The Gloucester Building, under erection on the old Hong Kong Hotel site, took more toll of human lives this morning, when a derrick collapsed.

That area was seething with excitement when a China Mail representative arrived on the spot. The first batch of casualties to meet his eyes were the bodies of two Chinese labourers lying outside of the wooden fencing on the Des Vaux Road side. They were attended by a body of willing workers; some of whom were members of the St. John Ambulance Brigade, who had hurriedly left their office desks.

Rough pieces of timbers were turned into splints and all sorts of garments were torn up to make into bandages, and before a few minutes had elapsed, these two men were properly bandaged up and made as comfortable as the circumstances would permit.

A visit to the inside of the fencing revealed the body of a Chinese just at the entrance of the gateway. This poor man was beyond all medical aid.

A couple of feet away from him was another man, very badly hit and suffering from concussion. Dr. Coogan and other members of the Ambulance Brigade were attending to him, and every means known to medical men were employed to assist the man to breathe.

Story of Collapse.

How these men came to this sad fate was told to our representative by many eye-witnesses, some of whom were employed on the job. It appeared that a derrick was hoisted up with the end of the wooden beam resting on a steel beam already fastened into position on the second floor. This derrick was employed for hoisting other beams to the fourth floor. Running lengthwise from beam to beam was a wooden platform of massive build. On this platform stood five men, whose duties were to guide the steel beams that were being hoisted up to their right position.

The wooden pole supporting the derrick, as stated above, was resting on a steel beam on the second floor. And somehow or other, the wooden pole slid out of position just as a steel beam was being hoisted. The result of this was that, as the end of the pole fell off its support, the head of the pole with its burden fell to the ground. The weight of this was caught by the platform on which stood five men, resulting in the platform being broken in halves.

Fall from Fourth Floor.

The five men came tumbling down to earth from the fourth floor. One man was, however, fortunate because as he fell, he came into contact with the steel rope dangling from the head of the derrick. He seized hold of this rope and hauled himself up to safety. The other four men were less fortunate, in that two of them fell right into the roadway, smashing the little wooden shed erected just above the gateway. These two men were seriously injured, but to what extent it was impossible to ascertain.

One man fell just within a few feet of the entrance and he was killed instantaneously. Two feet or so away from him fell the other man, and he was suffering from concussion when our representative saw him.

Ambulance's Delay.

Although willing workers, together with Dr. Coogan, were early on the scene and did all they possibly could, it must be mentioned that it took almost 45 minutes before the motor ambulance came on the scene. This is inexplicable.

The first ambulance to arrive was one from the Tung Wah Hospital, and not one from the Central Fire Brigade, which is only a short distance away.

PIRACY SEQUEL.

NINE KIDNAPPED VICTIMS
RELEASED.

THREE STILL HELD.

With regard to the piracy of a Cheung Chau fishing boat off Shek Muk Chau, in Chinese waters last Sunday night (reported in last Monday's China Mail), nine of the 12 kidnapped persons have been released by the pirates, and returned to Cheung Chau yesterday. The party includes two men, two women and five children.

The three who are still being held by the pirates for ransom are Chan Chuen-shun, master of the junk, Chan Sui-hee (4), his son, and a fisherman named Leung Tai-yau.

At the time of the piracy the junk was out in the fishing grounds with a crew of 25. Thirteen had left the junk in four small boats to stake fishing nets a little distance from their craft when a large pirate junk slipped alongside the fishing boat, which was unable to repulse the invaders as she did not carry any small arms. Her only armament were two cannons, which, however, were useless because they took too long to load.

After overpowering those on the junk, the pirates fired a volley of rifle and revolver shots at the four dinghies to prevent their crews going to the assistance of the "mother" craft. Three of the bullets found marks in the bodies of three of the fishers, one of whom, a son of the master, named Chan Wai-tai (10), was killed, whilst the other two were wounded.

No Signs of Junk.

The pirates then sailed the fishing junk away and no signs of it have since been seen, although a Police launch was sent out from Hong Kong to look for it, in the anticipation that the pirates would abandon the craft after looting it. It appears, however, that the pirates intend to retain the craft as an addition to their fleet.

The first intimation of the piracy reached Hong Kong last Monday afternoon when two of the marooned fishermen arrived at Cheung Chau in another fishing boat.

Following their report a Police launch was sent out to Shek Muk Chau to bring back the others and also tow in the four dinghies. On the return of the junk the body of Chan Wai-tai was taken to the mortuary and the two wounded men sent to the Kowloon Hospital.

The Kent player, had shown his sterling worth in scoring 41.

"Duleep" joined Hammond at the wicket and a bright period of batting was witnessed before the Gloucester "star" fell to one of Grimmett's wrong 'uns for 38.

"Duleep" at the luncheon interval was 38 and Hendren 9 out of a total of 129—3.

BRIGHT FUTURE?

PROSPECTS OF THE RUBBER
INDUSTRY.

GOOD TIME AHEAD.

London, Yesterday.

Mr. H. Fildes, proposing the toast of the rubber industry at the annual dinner of the Malayan Planters' Association, said that with the multifarious uses to which rubber was put and with the spread of its uses in civilisation, the prospects of the future must be bright.

Sir Stanley Fois said that though rubber was now in the doldrums, he hoped that they would all keep cheerful and not become pessimists. There was a good time ahead. They should all sympathise with the men on the spot who were carrying on amid great difficulty.

Lord Colwyn said that there was no reason for the present pessimism. People were selling good shares for no apparent reason. There were difficulties all over the world. As a banker he was hopeful that prosperity would soon be restored.—Reuter.

INDO-CHINA DEBATE.

GENEROUSITY AND JUSTICE
WITH NATIVES.

TO FIGHT COMMUNISM.

At the end of the debate upon Indo-China the Chamber rejected by 325 votes to 260 a radical motion asking for the creation of a committee of control, and voted on a motion giving confidence to the Government in order to fight Communism in Indo-China and apply the traditional French principles of generosity and justice with the natives.—Havas.

little resistance and the score at the ten interval was 231—6. "Duleep" being 107 not out and Tate 24 not out. The Sussex bowler reached his fifty, but soon left after giving a great display of free hitting, which produced 98 runs in 70 minutes during a breezy seventh wicket partnership. His powerful driving yielded eight 4's.

Robins was soon snapped up at the wicket, and then came the downfall of the superb "Duleep." Exandean brought off a splendid catch in the deep field to end the finest effort witnessed at Lord's for many a day. "Duleep" saw Duleepsinhji achieve the highest distinction of a cricketer's career. He compiled the highest individual score in England-Australia Test Matches at Lord's, and emulated his famous uncle, K. S. Ranjitsinhji, in scoring a century in his first Test. He gave chances when 65 and 99, and batted for four hours and three quarters, giving a delightful exhibition of

CIVIL WAR.

NANKING MEETS MUCH
REVERSE.

NORTHERN CLAIMS.

Peking, Yesterday.

Mr. Chu Ao-hsiang, in a weekly review, declared that Marshal Chiang Kai-shek was defeated in his offensive along the Lung-Hai Railway, as the North-western troops knew his plans and so concealed seventy thousand men in ambush in villages and attacked him. The flank and rear of the Nanking forces have now retreated to their original defensive positions. As regards Shantung, General Han Fu-chu, the Nationalist Commander, hoped to establish the Shantung Provincial Government at Tsingtao, but found that Marshal Yen Hsi-shan had long ago made arrangements with General Chang Hsueh-liang, head of the Manchurian Government, that Tsingtao should be made a naval base of the North-eastern Squadron of gunboats.

General Han Fu-chu also hoped that General Liu Chen-nien, the Nationalist Officer commanding the troops at Chefoo, would assist him, but General Liu had accepted an appointment as commander of the Nineteenth Army Corps, under Marshal Yen Hsi-shan, and hence, after withdrawing from Tsinanfu to Chowtsun, General Han Fu-chu found that he could not proceed to Tsingtao, so is now attempting to retreat towards Hsuehchow, the Nationalist Headquarters along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, to link up with the Nanking forces.

The Shansi forces are advancing southward along the Tientsin-Pukow Railway, and Mr. Chu Ao-hsiang believed that they had taken Tai'an though no official information to that effect has yet come to hand.—Reuter.

MILITARY CONFERENCE.

Changsha, June 22.

A military conference was summoned by General Ho Ying-ching, Minister of War, yesterday to settle measures to finish the campaign against the Kwangsi troops and "Ironclads" in Hunan. General Ho will remain here for the time being to direct the enveloping movement against the insurgents.

Owing to the troop movements yesterday, based upon the new plan, little fighting has taken place latterly. The various Route Armies are reported to have got into touch with one another, with the Hunan forces stationed in the Changsha-Chuechow sector, the Kwangtung units in the Chuechow-Yuhshien region to prevent the enemy from escaping southward towards the Kwangtung-Hunan border, and the Kiangsi troops between Pingkiang and Liling to block the way to the Kiangsi boarder.

The Hunan rebels under Tang Seng-ming are reported to have been hard hit by the Government troops. More than 1,000 prisoners, with 20 machine-guns and 50 field-pieces, were captured by the "dare-devil" Corps under Commander Wei Su-chung, south of Changsha.

WILLIAM POWELL LIMITED.

Difficult Trading
Year.

A NEW APPOINTMENT.

At the annual general meeting of Messrs. William Powell, Limited, to-day the Chairman (Mr. M. Manuk), said that he regretted to report a slight loss on the year. He was sure, however, that shareholders would realise that the period under review had been a very difficult one, owing to troubled local conditions.

The Chairman also announced the appointment of Mr. Hubert Overy as Managing Director of the Company, and, in doing so, paid a tribute to Mr. Overy's long and faithful service with Messrs. William Powell.

Chairman's Speech.

In proposing the adoption of the Report and Accounts, the Chairman said:—

Gentlemen:—The Report and Accounts having been in your hands for the prescribed period, I will, with your permission, follow the usual procedure and take them as read.

It is regretted that the Accounts before you show a small loss for the year, but I am sure you will realise, as it is generally realised throughout the Colony, that conditions during the year under review have rendered trading difficult, more so in fact than preceding years.

Stock as certified by the Managing Director has been valued at cost, and depreciated, where necessary.

Mr. Overy's Appointment.

Your Directors have been pleased to appoint Mr. H. Overy as Managing Director of the Company, and I have no doubt that this action will be endorsed by you without hesitation, especially having regard to the long, faithful, and loyal service which Mr. Overy has rendered to the Company.

AMBULANCE IN SMASH.

A motor accident, in which a Government motor ambulance and a P.W.D. lorry was involved, occurred on Stubbs Road at 4 p.m. yesterday.

According to a report made to the Police Traffic Department by Chan Yeung, the ambulance drivers, his vehicle was proceeding up Stubbs Road. When near Sui Fai Terrace it passed the P.W.D. lorry which was going in the opposite direction.

When the two vehicles were about to pass the lorry suddenly skidded. Its rear swung round and struck the ambulance on the off side. The blow was a rather heavy one and caused considerable damage to the light body of the ambulance. The lorry, which was more strongly constructed, was not damaged.

The driver of the ambulance received cuts on his face and the right wrist from pieces of broken glass. His injury was attended to at the Government Civil Hospital.

EACH SEASON, ITS JOY,—AND ITS SORROW.

The modern man never comes to real or proper relaxation throughout the whole year. In Summer his poor body is driven from sport-scene to sport-scene, and in Winter from ball-room to ball-room. Gone are the times when one still spoke of "long winter evenings" and wondered how to pass them. Wireless and gramophone music now see to it that the tedium of even the longest winter evening is beguiled. This is the age of balls, dancing, music reigns and Prince Carnival leads all his subjects in the chase after pleasure. And here the simplest precepts of hygiene are only too frequently aimed against. The dance-to-day is looked upon as a "sport," but that which usually connotes the word,—exercise in pure fresh air,—is to be sought in vain in smoky and dusty halls. And then clothes! The ladies have certainly reached a high standard in the process of hardening themselves against climatic changes, but nevertheless, when, heated by dancing, they encounter a cold draught, how easy it is to catch a cold. Cough and hoarseness supervene, there is pain in the chest, and a general feeling of malaise. How annoying it is to be compelled to renounce some long-expected pleasure on account of a cold. Of course, relations and friends flock around with the best of advice; one advises elderberry tea or cold compresses and an electric hot cushion, another the old reliable Aspirin, but it is not so easy to get rid of a cold. The clever person takes precautions. There are many preventives against a cold recommended. But marshmallow sweets, li- quorice pastilles, etc., which only keep the mucous membrane moist are usually not sufficient. The well-

CENTRAL features Clive Brook in "The Return of Sherlock Holmes," the great detective story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. The picture is a splendid medium for the reproduction of this old classic. Clive Brook performs his role in great style and the other characters form the nucleus of a brilliant company. A cat cartoon is in support. A talkie film.

MAJESTIC presents Thomas Meighan in "A City Gone Wild," the story of New York's underworld. The attorney, who decides to exterminate two gangs who are in deadly conflict, finds to his horror that the "man behind the gun" is no other than his fiancée's father, is the screen story of "A City Gone Wild." With Louise Brooks, Meighan shapes in his best picture to date. A silent film.

STAR features John Barrymore in "The Beloved Rogue," the story of first a King's hatred and then his love for a renegade poet. The capture of the poet by the lover of Charlotte, the torture of him and the final rescue by the King himself is displayed in the delightful manner of the fifteenth century in France. A silent film.

WORLD presents John Gilbert in "Man, Woman and Sin," a picture relating to the life of an American newspaper reporter. The great Embassy Ball, Washington's largest social affair, is reproduced on a lavish scale in this film of adventure and romance in the journalistic world. A silent film.

The speed of Shamrock V. has surprised the experts, and the Yacht Racing Association has acted on a sporting suggestion from Sir Thomas Lipton to review her time allowance.

"MASITAR, one missee have ling you up when you go out, me no savvee what name but me cathee number." He produces a dirty piece of paper on which is written 24641. Mr. Tupman was in an embarrassing position—he knew so many ladies. He was not the man to spend hours perusing the Telephone Directory, so he spent an uneventful evening waiting for the second call. That was enough for him, he went out the next day and purchased the TELEPHONE HANDBOOK. Now he is able to tell in a few seconds who rang him up.

Contentment shows on the face of Mr. Tupman after his purchase of the Handbook. His note book is the result of a survey of this book. He is genuinely satisfied, and does not regret buying this book of reference.

O.S.K. ENTERPRISE.

FAST NEW FREIGHTER HERE.

S.S. KINAI MARU.

The Kinai Maru, one of the O.S.K.'s new fleet of cargo vessels, arrived in port on Thursday, and was yesterday thrown open to inspection. She is one of six new motor ships to be put on the Hong Kong-New York express freight run, and it is claimed for her that she can develop a speed of 18 knots.

The vessel does not carry any passengers, but special attention has been devoted to superior accommodation for the crew, their quarters being amidships, with the officers', and engineers' quarters on the deck above.

There were quite a number of visitors to the ship yesterday, when officers and officials of the company attended to show them round, after which tea was served.

Cargo Space. The Kinai Maru has special accommodation for silk, six rooms having been put in for the purpose. They have a total capacity of 857 tons. The ship also has four deep tanks for bulk oil, with accommodation for lots between 200 and 1,000 tons. In addition, she has four refrigerating chambers for 310 tons, and a magazine compartment for dangerous cargo, of 50 tons. The latest fire preventive appliances are installed throughout, and the steering is by Brown's Electro-Hydraulic Telemotor Gear.

PHILIPPINE LIFE.

"SHOOTING" PAGSANJAN RAPIDS.

A THRILLING EXPERIENCE.

A writer in the Shanghai Evening Post vividly describes a visit to the falls and gorge at Pagsanjan, which is one of the Philippines beauty spots, and within a few short hours of Manila.

He commences by describing the journey by motor car to Los Baños, which is the shores of Laguna de Bay, a large fresh water lake drained by the Pasig River, which reaches the sea at Manila.

Ready to Start. At the landing stage, a score or more of the long thin narrow canoes are clustered together about the boat. They are 20 to 22 feet long; about two feet wide and shallow as a pan. A boatman sits in the bow and another in the stern. A seat with a back-rest is placed on the bottom directly amidships. The passenger takes his position here, sitting with legs stretched out in front of him. Before embarking on the water journey, it is well to get into a bathing suit or pair of pyjamas for at times the flying spray and water cover the bottom of the banca.

When all is ready for the start the craft is pushed off, the boatmen ply their paddles and the journey up the river begins. For the first half hour the river is broad and smooth, flowing between groves of coconuts, banana plantations and clusters of houses. Gradually the character of the banks change, growing more precipitous. The coconut groves give place to tangled jungle. Whilst at other places the face of the rock is barren, sometimes broken by ribbon falls of water that the wind catches and blows back upon the cliff.

Jagged Rocks in Stream. As the ascent continues, the rapids grow in number. Sometimes the boatmen have a hard time getting their long craft up the swirling current but they grin and indicate that they know it will be much easier coming down. At one or two places it seems impossible to get through but they manage it some way, and after nearly two hours of heartbreaking pulling, paddling and tugging, the last rapid is passed and the banca is poised to a landing among the boulders. Here every one gets out and, climbing over the huge rocks that are all about, comes with a breath-taking suddenness upon the fall itself.

A Big Waterfall. At first sight it seems to be coming from a hole in the cliff about 150 feet above the pool. Over it towers the stone face of the canyon, a veritable cup of rock with no apparent outlet. The pool is about 60 yards across, a swirling mass of clear bright water that is surprisingly cool. The spray blows about the cliffs, the roar of the fall is in the ears, and the rocks resound with its reverberations. To take a dip into its cool greenness seems the logical thing and the boatmen, dripping with sweat from their hard work, promptly set the example by diving in from the high rocks that guard the portal. Follow one of them swimming across the pool and he will point high beyond the fall itself. When you come to a certain spot, the narrow cleft through which it drops is seen with another fall high above it. This is the best view of the "Talon Cavite" as it is known in Tagalog tongue, but it is only for those who swim the pool beneath the flying spray. There is no danger for any one who can swim at all.

Return Trip Quicker. All too soon the boatmen signal that it is time to return. They settle the passenger in his seat, cautioning against holding his hands outside the banca, for often the sides scrap against the jagged rocks as the rapids are passed. The downward trip takes less than half the time it took to come up. Down the long reaches, guided by the sure strokes of the steersman, the roaring waters are entered and the boat fairly flies down the narrow stream. Another smooth place and all are calm until the current seizes the boat and swirls it down the booming fall.

The very character of the gorge itself seems different on the down trip. The walls crowd closely on the river. At some spots it is like a tiny lake surrounded by 200 feet cliffs. At others it dashes wrathfully against the stone face to be turned away almost at right angles to the other side.

Only the river racing madly on its appointed course and bearing the light canoe along with it seems alive. The contrast between the arduous up journey and the swift case of the "downward" return makes a most enjoyable memory of the event.

Allegations.
Peking, Yesterday.

Mr. Chu Ao-hsiang, the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs of Shansi, has declared that it has been discovered that Mr. Maze and Colonel Hayley Bell have frequently been exchanging views on politic-military matters by means of the Customs code, discussing supplies of munitions, etc.

On this account Colonel Bell was anxious to remove the documents when the Shansi-ites took over the Customs, but these documents are now in the hands of the Northerners.

Mr. Chu Ao-hsiang also stated that Marshal Yen Hsi-shan has protested to the Powers regarding the collection of the duties at Shanghai, and that he understood that the Powers have already protested to Nanking.—Reuter.

ADVERSARIA.

"Without fear, favour or malice."

A few years ago
The Revival there were pub-Explained. lished in the China Mail every Saturday a series of comments on local topics under the heading "Adversaria." Conducted by a well-known journalist, Mr. Tom Wright, they were notable for their wit, frankness and deliberation. "Without fear or favour," might have been the device. This popular feature we intend to revive, under the old title of "Ad-versaria," which will appear in the China Mail every Saturday.
Do not miss it.In most Christian countries
Topsy Land. the Bishops live
a mid the luxuries of a palace and the Deans make shift as best they can. But in Hong Kong the Bishop lives down below, (this must not be misconstrued) in the heat and in the midst of the people. The Dean resides on one of the highest elevations; to call upon him is an exertion not recommended for the weak of heart or lung. Mountaineers might well climb to the summit of Mount Kellat without feeling even a vestige of pride or exhaustion at the accomplishment. Butmountaineers do not usually call upon Deans for cups of tea and the inevitable vicarage stand-by,
the Gold Flake.It is not often Wisdom from that we have the Bench. wisdom from the local Bench.although we often have that which passes with the dull for
wit. Mr. R. E. Lindsell occasionally regales the Court with humour of the Darling variety,
but on Wednesday he was very Draconian. A young Chinese woman appeared before him in connection with a case of kidnapping. She did not seem to think the case very serious, or else
perhaps she detected something on the magistrate's face. Anyway, she smiled. In fact, we believe it was a broad grin. (There are few subtleties of expression
among the coolie people). Mr.
Lindsell seized the opportunity.
"How dare you smile!" he rebuked
her sternly. "Nine months' hard labour." The two phrases do not sound well together. Supposing the poor woman was born with a smile; supposing he himself had inspired it. What then?
Can a magistrate rebuke himself?
As though this world were not gloomy enough!Residents of a A Pageant certain local Hotel
of Spain, had an amusing
introduction to Spanish nobility recently. A Count—the real thing—came to reside there. His table, always groaning under a mass of flowers, was assiduously attended by the "boys." Indeed, plain, ordinary plebeians had perforce to wait, drumming their fingers impatiently on the tablecloth, while
No. 1, No. 2, and their bowing underlings paid court to this Castilian patrician.The Count, who was seldom to be seen without an obese cigar
looming from an amber holder, used to order his courses with all the pomp and explosiveness of a Sergeant Major (old style).
"Flash!" he would hiss malevolently, whilst his interpretation of "bread" had the crash and reverberation of thunder.The crowning triumph of his residence was his departure. His fair Dulcinea visited him. They went away together; she riding in a sedan chair from the lounge of the hotel. (No one had ever dared to do that before). He strutted beside her with the dignity of a major domo. One felt that all that was needed to complete this little pageant of Spain
was an entourage of blackamoors dressed in red.A brewery is short-Beer For ly to be opened in Baronets. the Colony, we hear.Mr. Bourne has been invited to draw up the plans, so we may expect to see the building rising above the plains of Kowloon as quickly as the dragons' teeth grew into armies in the Greek myth. The managing director is a noted baronet,
who has his seat at East Point.
The aristocracy and alcohol seem to be as inseparable as the heavenly twins, and Peer and Beer do not rhyme for nothing.
It has not yet been decided what name shall be given to this local liquor, but as a suggestion "Shing Mun" Brand has a great deal to commend it.Whilst writing of our local industries, I might add that my learned friend, Dr. Willy Pottstleswaiter is wondering whether a vinegar factory would be a paying concern. Enquiries by spinsters will be welcomed.The Next familiar that is Local of us in Hong Knighthood. Kong is that of the Hon. Mr.
W. E. L. Shenton. With the passing of the years, perhaps, "Shenton" will be to Hong Kong what "Raffles" is to Singapore. A name to confound with. It may not even be too flattering to predict a time when small boys will gaze upwards in awe at a granite figure, and say "Who is that, Mama?" Their ignorance, we presume, will be rewarded by a sound spanking.Mr. Shenton, as an Unofficial Member, undoubtedly represents almost everybody in the Colony;
he is the spokesman of the man in the street; the champion of the under dog. His interest in the question of salaries of Civil Servants is believed to be little short of paternal. We humbly suggest that His Majesty should be notified (if he does not already know of them) of the heroic services rendered to this Colony by Mr. Shenton. A Knighthood at the next Birthday Honours would be but a modest reward for such unselfish toil, such gallant sacrifice. We understand, also, that on his retirement from the Colony, it is Mr. Shenton's fond dream to stand as a candidate for Parliament. It is not known which party he will favour; but
Mr. Churchill's seems to offer possibilities.

News in Brief.

living at 8, Yuen Chau Street, received injuries to her head yesterday when she accidentally fell from the roof of the kitchen of the house.
She is now in the Kwong Wah employed at the Hong Kong Hotel,

was admitted to the Government
Civil Hospital yesterday suffering from multiple abrasions received through accidentally falling down
some steps at the hotel.Cheung Lin, a wash man report to the Police yesterday that some time between 1 and 3 p.m., on June 12 a thief stole from a clothes line at the barracks several pieces of clothing worth $40.A workman named Chan Chau (45), employed at the Talkod

the Government Civil Hospital with an injured right hand, caused through a metal plate slipping off the drilling machine. The injury is not regarded as serious.

LAWN TENNIS.

EXHIBITION MATCHES AT K.C.C.

YOUTHFUL JAPAN.

The first game of the series of matches between members of the Meiji University and representatives of the Colony was played between A. L. Sullivan and Seo. The local player appeared stiff and out of form and the Japanese took the first set at 6-3. It was mainly a base line duel with occasional advances to the net. Sullivan gave points away, experimenting with his service.The second set saw Seo take further points for double faults, and with the score at 4-all it looked as if the Japanese would win in straight sets. Sullivan, however, took the next two games to draw on terms again.The third set found Sullivan improving both his service and driving and it was not surprising to see him win at 6-2. Taking it on the whole, the tennis was not of a very high standard.

Win for Finchers.

The next match on the programme was the duel between the Fincher brothers and Okamoto partnered by Kumachi. The first set saw the local pair in a dashing mood
and they carried the set at 6-2.
"E.F." played particularly well overhead and his smashes earned loud applause from the crowd of spectators. "E.C." played his careful and steady game, several times,
by brilliant strategic moves out-positioned the opposition. Okamoto was faulty in his driving but Kumachi, if not spectacular, was both steady and reliable.The second set showed a great improvement in the play of the Japanese pair, they seemed to understand each other better. The Fincher brothers at one period of the game were leading 5-1, but so good was the driving of Okamoto and the lobbing of Kumachi, that 6-all was called. The local pair, however, took the next two games
to win the set and match.Brilliant Fujikuras.
J. and T. Fujikura proved too strong for the local pair, Ng Szekwong and Ho Ka-lau, and in failing light the match was abandoned with the honours even. It was probably due to the light that T.
Fujikura mistimed his drives and gave the local pair the second set at 7-5.In the opening set, the Japanese gave a dazzling display of overhead play and the driving of T. Fujikura was beyond reproach. Incidentally he is the junior singles champion of Japan, and he and his brother are the junior champions in doubles.
Ng Sze-kwong did not play up to his usual form, and Ho Ka-lau seemed uncertain with the majority of his shots. In the first set an even game ensued as far as games were concerned, but the driving of T. Fujikura and the excellent lobbing of his brother showed up the local pair to disadvantage.
The Japanese pair took the first set at 8-5.The second set found the local players in a more enterprising mood, and with the Japanese over-cager and peaching on one another's preserves they eventually took the set at 8-6.To-day's programme should provide a still better entertainment, as the University's "star" players will be seen in action as also the Hong Kong champions.

WATER POLO.

KOWLOON DEFEAT ROYAL ARTILLERY.

Two water polo matches, one in the First Division and the other in the Second Division of the League,
were played in the V.R.C. bath
last evening.The First Division game was won by Kowloon who defeated the Royal Artillery by two goals to nil. It was a good sporting struggle, but Kowloon had better knowledge of the finer points of the game and this gave them victory. The gunners were never permitted to get near enough to the Kowloon goal to shoot effectively. They took a few long shots, however, and a couple came very near.The Artillery were also defeated in the Second Division game, going down to the Somerset by three goals. The "Sets" were given the lead by Parkes soon after the start and they maintained it right up to half time. The Infantrymen had more of the game in the second half and netted two more times
without reply, Parkes being responsible for two of the three goals.On June 17 Mrs. Mason, of 37, Jordan Road, Kowloon, reported to the Police the theft from the house of money and jewellery worth $325.70. As the result of Police investigation a Chinese has been arrested on a charge of larceny as a servant. All the stolen property is reported to have been recovered.

COUPLETS.

There was silence deep as death
When she smelt poor hubby's breath.Thou wast not born for death,
immortal bird.
The sportsman muttered as he missed his third.With a smile on her lips and a tear in her eye
She abstracted my wallet and left me bone dry.Perhaps in this neglected spot is laid
Some mutt who went "No Trumps"
without a spade.A moment's halt, a momentary
taste:
Then ferrywards and tramwards
hubbies haste.

"THE GIRL FRIEND."

SALISBURY COMPANY'S OPENING SUCCESS.

TALENTED ARTISTES.

The Salisbury Company opened at the Star Theatre, Kowloon
last night, with that popular musical comedy the "Girl Friend," and scored a great success.Mr. J. Grant Anderson took the role of Richard Dennison, the wayward young married man who wishes to be on best behaviour with his wife (played by Miss Dorothy James)
so as to obtain a large sum of money in bonds from his uncle on the completion of one year's happy married life.Complications ensue when Miss Brown arrives at the hotel
where they are staying and poses as Mrs. Dennison as, owing to the fact that she has lost her money,
she cannot obtain accommodation for the night.The play is enlivened with snappy jazz tunes and songs,
which keep one well awake in spite of the heat.The "Girl Friend" is being played again to-night and it is hoped that there will be a better house than last night, for it is well worth seeing.

ATLANTIC ROUTES.

NOT PRACTICAL YET FOR AEROPLANES.

LINKING THE TWO WORLDS.

Rugby, Yesterday.
Lord Thomson, Minister for Air, stated at the Imperial Press Conference to-day that the Airship R-100 would leave for Montreal in the last few days of July and that he would himself be making a journey in the airship
R-101 to India, in September.
Lord Thomson said that he could never see that a flight across the Atlantic from east to west by aeroplane would be a commercial proposition. Experts were now in Greenland considering another route and he believed that their investigations would result in something practical within the next 18 months or two years.
What a factor that would be in linking the old world with the new; when they would be able to go from Croydon to Chicago through Canada in three or four days!—British Wireless Service.

DYNAMITE EXPLODES

LIGHTNING STRIKES A STEAMER.

Brockville, Ont., Yesterday.
While the crew of forty-two of the steamer J. B. King were engaged in drilling the river bed of the St. Lawrence, lightning struck the vessel.Thirty-one were killed and eleven seriously injured. Twenty tons of dynamite aboard exploded, and many of the victims were blown to bits.A coastguard cutter picked up the survivors.—Reuters' American Service.

Ten Years Ago

[From the "China Mail,"
June 28, 1920.]

To-day's dollar is worth 3/74.

One of the biggest burglaries hailed for some time has to be recorded. Some time last night or early this morning, the premises of
J. Ullmann & Co., of Queen's Road
Central, situated at the foot of Wyndham Street, were broken into by a gang of burglars, and a large quantity of valuables stolen.
Two safes, in which were kept a large quantity of diamonds, gold and silver watches, had been broken open and the major part of their contents removed. The loss is estimated to be about $200,000.

QUICK CHOOSING.

Miss Susan Lawrence Does Not Waste Time.

Miss Susan Lawrence, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Health, asked for some cotton frocks to be sent to the Ministry of Health. Six frocks arrived while she was immersed in Ministerial business.

She looked up when a saleswoman entered, quickly pointed to one with her pen, and said, "I'll have that," and resumed writing.

The saleswoman found herself outside, again a little dazed, and without having said one word.

Miss Ellen Wilkinson, Labour member for Middlesbrough East in the House of Commons, wrote to Mr. Street, organising secretary of the National Cotton Week, stating that she had found it impossible to buy a cotton frock suitably severe for House of Commons wear.

"I recognise that cotton has not hitherto been fashionable in that particular kind of wear. Shops and

BLOUSE RETURNS.

Extremely Becoming and Smart.

In keeping with the return of pre-war feminine fashions have come the blouse and skirt, but with a difference. No longer are women to wear the monstrous blouses with high boned necks that were worn by our mothers with their floor-sweeping and dust-collecting skirts. The present day skirt and blouse have been youthified and are extremely becoming and smart. With the return of the blouse has come the partial eclipse of the jumper, that useful adjunct to our wardrobes that was an ever present standby. But the jumper will never be entirely relinquished as it has been much too useful in the past.

The blouse complete with bows, frills and tucks is now firmly established. It takes a long time for anything new to take on out here and at first few blouses and

The Grace and Charm of the 1930 Mode.

These smart Summer hats feature the importance of fine straw, all the smartest for being contrasted with fabrics, ribbon, lace and patterned designs.

THE TATTOOED LADY.

This remarkable story concerns a young lady of Berlin, and is scientifically authenticated. She had a favourite frock, which was originally pale pink but afterwards it was dyed dark red. She wore it at an afternoon party, was seized with severe pains, and took to her bed, where her doctor decided that she had some form of poisoning. The pains passed off, but the patient discovered that her body was tattooed in dark red with the pattern of her dress. And the pattern was fast, nor all her tears washed out a bit of it.

The dyers, sued for damages, protested that all care had been used, and the dress was submitted to the Experimental Institute for Biochemistry. Here volunteers wore it and were none the worse, but the patient, having put it on again, was soon forced by pain to discard it, and a perceptible darkening of the tattooing was observed.

The doctor charged with the investigation then applied the tests for hysteria. He took the patient blindfolded into a darkened room and there held alternately against her skin the dark red material and another which felt like it but was uncoloured. The patient, though she could not see red, could feel it, and responded with cries of pain to its application, though suffering the touch of the other material unmoved. The investigation of this curious case, which seems to have something in common with that of the chameleon which burst when it was placed on a piece of Scotch blaid, is proceeding.

Singapore Free Press) I saw a flowered chiffon blouse worn with a smart black satin skirt which had pleats on each side, just below the knee. The blouse was quite simply made with a triple jabot collar and the turnout looked wonderfully smart. Another blouse I admired very much was one of pale "champagne rose" crepe worn outside the skirt, but held at the natural waistline by a band of the material so that it gave the effect of a tuck in blouse. The fullness in front was draped and caught by a brooch.

Tailored blouses are smart for morning wear to town and are just the thing for street wear as they present a finished appearance and look better out of doors than a sleeveless frock. The "tailor made girl," there are many of them, who do not look their best in "fussy" clothes will find that the blouse and skirt suit their type to perfection.

The neckline of your blouses should be watched. Women with long necks should go in for slightly higher necklines while the woman with a short neck will make it seem longer if she adopts a long neckline. The neckline of blouses allows great scope for decoration being finished in many novel ways. Your lingerie touches can be original as you like. An up-standing tuck, and lace edged frill of organdie makes a charming frame for a piquant little face, while tabs of fine white pique, fagot-stitched together, make a novel little collar. For plain V-necks a knitted frill of fresh white lawn will give a touch of distinction to a simple blouse. Scarves are also useful and the lining of your hat may be made to match your scarf with charming effect.

Skirts are flared or pleated, the pleats generally starting just below or a little above the knee. Many skirts are cut with the fashionable yoke effect that is one of the new fashions of the present. You may wear a skirt of silk blouse with a wide or plain material to match the prevailing shade of your blouse, or a pink skirt with a plain blouse, and with a wide band of the same material at the waist. The smart combinations of the season are

WRAPS FOR TENNIS.

Wraps for tennis are almost as important as the frocks. A short coat is fashionable, and so is a long coat which will do for other occasions.

Tailored coats in white French velour are stitched on the collar and cuffs, and have stitched strapings down the back. A three-quarter coat is hand embroidered in coloured, wools, and a beige ground seems popular. Coloured wools are worked in a bright design on the cuffs, pockets and collar of a long stockinette velour coat which achieves warmth without weight.

But short coats are always very fanciful, and light weight woollen materials with much applique work in contrasting colours create some very delightful designs.

DANCING FOR HEALTH.

Many physical exercises for the promotion of health and a perfect physique, says a writer in an exchange, have at one time and another been devised by those who advocate exercise as the best formula for "keeping fit," but none of these has ever had such far-reaching effects as dancing.

Dancing is supreme as an exercise. The value of exercise is always proportionate to the pleasure which accompanies it, and in this respect hardly any set exercise, advised by doctors for the attainment of health, can compete with the vital benefits imparted by daily dancing.

Ten minutes devoted to the active pursuit of a sport or recreation in which enter interest and enthusiasm do a great deal more good than twice that time devoted to that which fails to interest. And there is always a great deal to interest in the ballroom.

Dancing moderately indulged will "keep you up to scratch," for dancing and slackness never go together. It also keeps one elastic and plastic, for every muscle is brought into play when dancing.

Moreover, dancing develops and keeps the brain quick, active and responsive. That in itself imparts a feeling of fitness. So it will be seen that from dancing there is to be obtained what many other exercises and sports yield in theory only.

There is, too, this great additional merit in dancing—it leads to the process of simultaneously adjusting the mind, the emotions, and the muscular system. It tends to promote quickness of adaptation and alertness of control.

Bringing as it does mind and body into union the result is to restore the human machine to that healthy state in which worry, anxiety, and mental hesitation, common afflictions in these days of bustle and turmoil, are absent.

What an unparalleled tonic dancing is, too—moral as well as physical! Yet there is no finer sedative in all the world. Its immediate effect is to soothe and calm, yet at the same time infuse a feeling of jubilation and buoyancy. Furthermore, dancing keeps both circulation and digestion in good working order. It is only necessary to take a peep into any ballroom to be convinced of its marvellous powers as a rejuvenator. In a nutshell, dancing is really the organised expression of energy. The excessive unrest of to-day that is noticeable on all sides, if it had no sublimating outlet, would simply fritter itself away in purposelessness—ending in exhaustion, both physical and mental and hopeless inaction. So dance and be healthy. It is the proved curative formula for the jaded, the depressed, and the languid.

FOR THE KITCHEN.

A strainer to be used in the boiling of greens is a wire frame, shaped so that it fits into the saucepan, and prevents the greens from boiling over. It is of such real value that one wonders the idea is not generally employed.

Another wire basket, this time to be used when frying fish, is a deep pan, has a handle attached, and when the food is cooked, the basket is raised, and clipped by means of the handle in an oblique position. In this way, the food is conveniently drained before serving to table.

IN THE BATHROOM.

In the bathroom, more than any other room in the house, articles which serve two purposes, and take up little space, are a boon. A white enamel enamel bathtub, illustrated in this new style, is a convenient and compact addition to the bathroom. It is a compact addition to the bathroom. It is a compact addition to the bathroom.

PLUMP GIRLS.

Business Men Think Them Too Slow.

It is a hard world for the plump girl these days. The reason? Well, the Big Business Men who run the offices and shops of London summarise the thing like this.

Plump Girls are good-tempered, and never have attacks of temperament. But they lack speed.

Slim Girls are sometimes "difficult," and powder their noses "so much." But they are alert and efficient.

And so curves are out of favour with Big Business Men. They prefer those efficient straight lines.

The Slim - the Best.

I went along to a big City office (writes an Evening News correspondent) to question the head of it. My card was taken by a brisk, slip of a girl at the inquiry office, and I was ushered by a smart shingled girl secretary into the chief's room. "The slimmer the better," he said, firmly.

"That's how I judge a girl. In the boxing world they say that a good big fun is always better than

LACE BLOUSES.

Chic Again For Afternoon Wear.

The newest tuck-in blouses for afternoon wear are of lace, a rather coarse lace, not unlike Cluny, mounted on georgette.

They look extremely well with the satin, velvet, or faced-cloth skirts that are part of so many of the new costume ensembles.

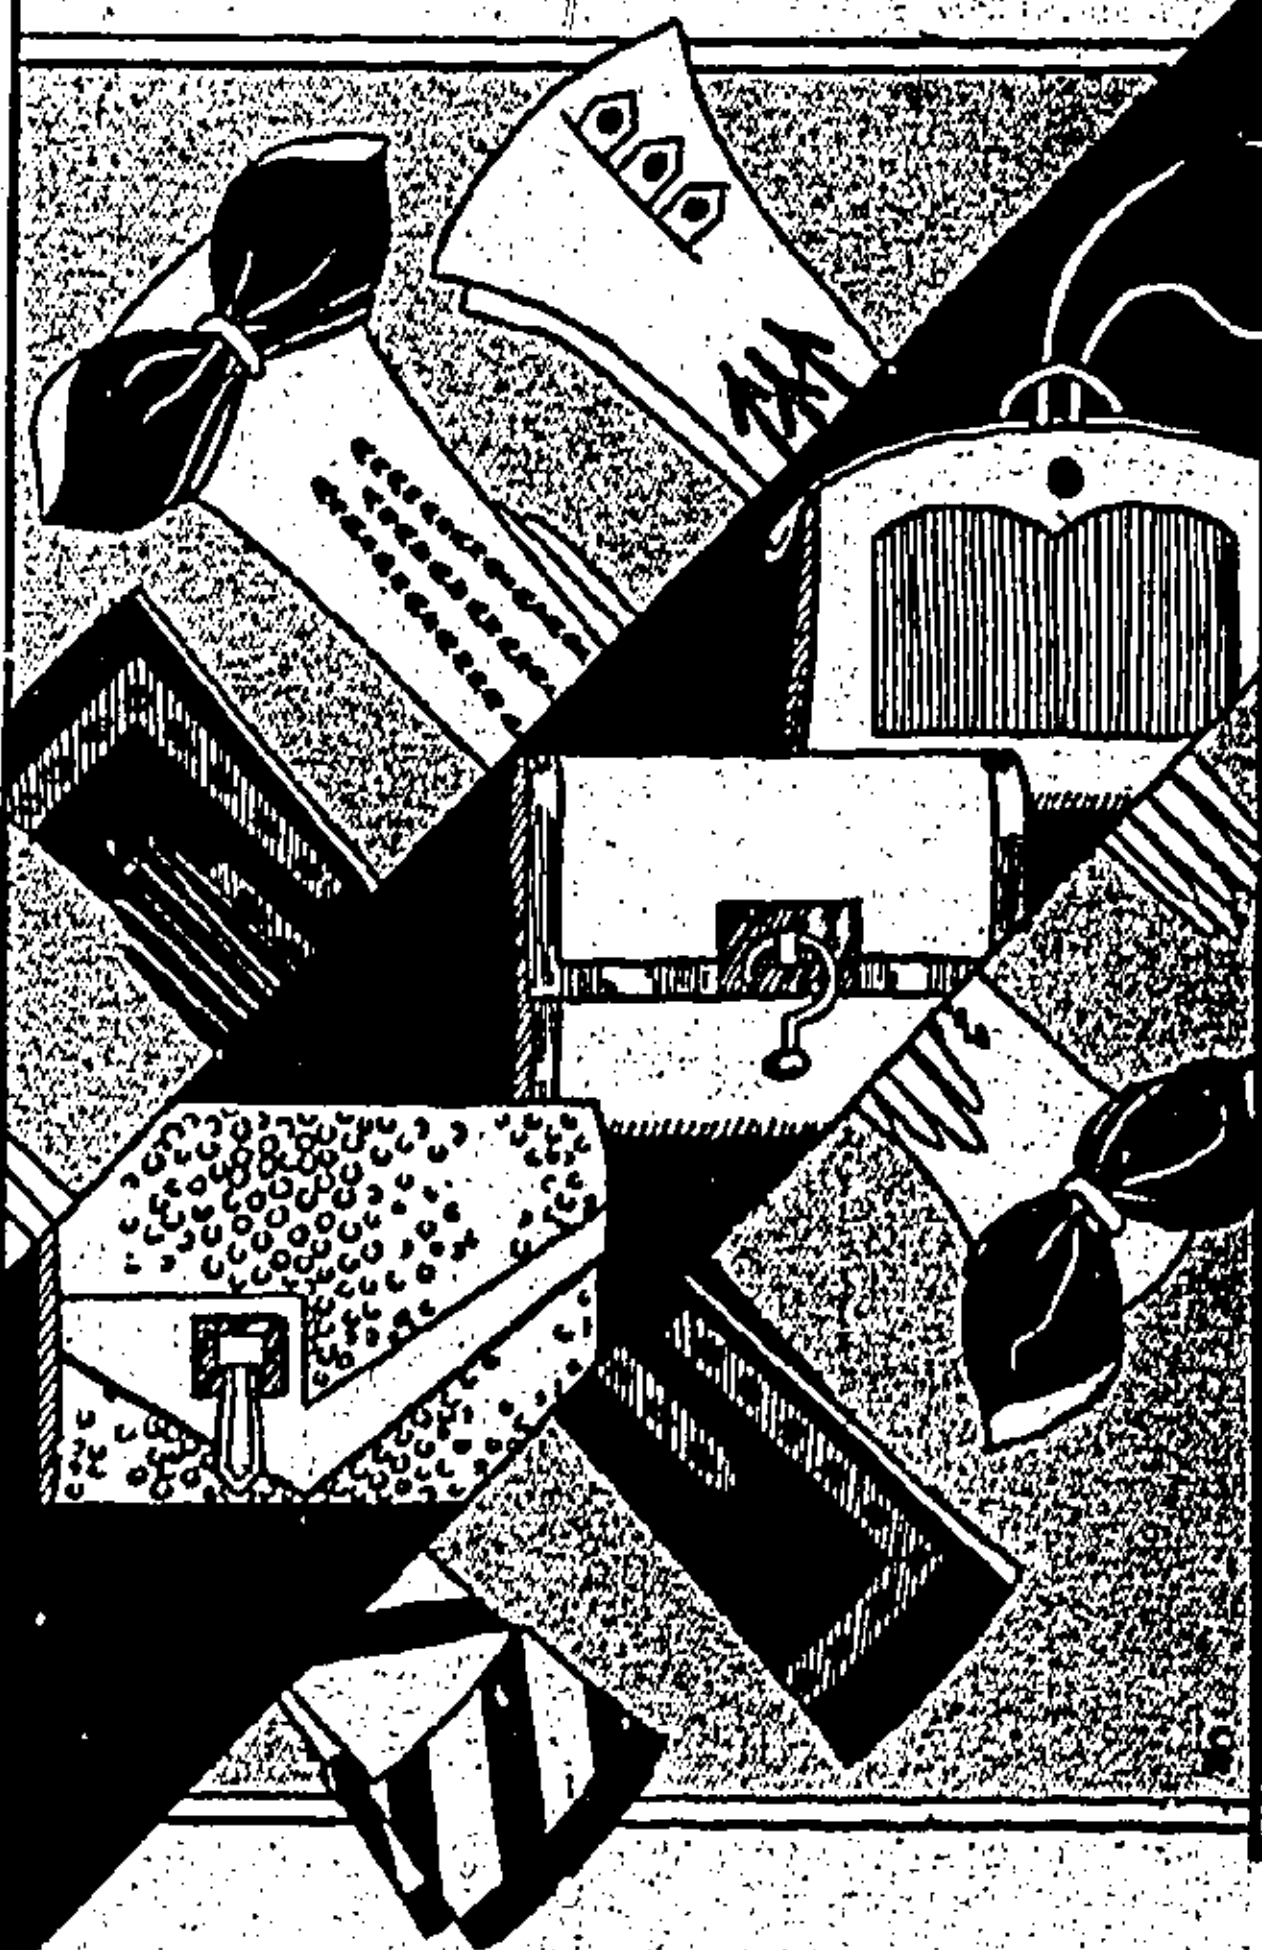

The one in the sketch has a pretty quaint collar. It is cut in one with the front and is tied at the back in a small tight bow without trailing ends. The cuffs are treated in a similar way.

The skirt has a shaped yoke which moulds the hips, but is not deep enough to restrict its wearer's movements.

The back is quite plain, so that the folds do not become creased with sitting. There is, however, a considerable amount of fullness at the sides, owing to the circular cut of both flounces.

A very interesting feature of this skirt is the way in which the right side of the front crosses over the left and terminates far over, on the left side.

GLOVES and BAGS

New styles are decidedly different—Fashion presents new gloves and bags as smart, different and charming as the costumes they will accompany. Gloves with long wrists and fanciful cuffs to wear with short sleeve frocks. Bags in pouch and envelope shape with trimmings and ornaments to match or contrast with the ensemble.

a good little fun. In the business world it's just the opposite.

"I've had secretaries who were like dumplings. You couldn't rattle 'em—give them that credit. They were always calm. But when you wanted speed they just couldn't do it. They were just like steam-rollers: dependable but slow."

Never Sulked. "They were good-tempered, I admit, and never flew into tantrums, or sulked. But what's the use of a secretary being good-tempered if she's so sluggish that her chief is always in a rage?"

"I'd rather be good-tempered myself."

"So nowadays I always pick the slim ones for job in this office."

The great London stores like them, too. A stores' chief told me that the fewer curves an assistant had, the more alert and businesslike she was. They had no admiration for a—

Plump and portly Mary Rose, Who daily ever fatter grows, (Continued at foot of next Column.)

Who cannot even see her toes. She is so very adipose.

They sometimes made an exception in the cosmetic department, he said. A flawless complexion was the only thing that mattered there.

But while the stern world of business frowns on adipose tissue, the kindly Post Office welcomes it with a motherly smile. The girls behind the grille in the Post Office are chosen by examination, and as long as they pass the tests they are all right. Their weight does not matter.

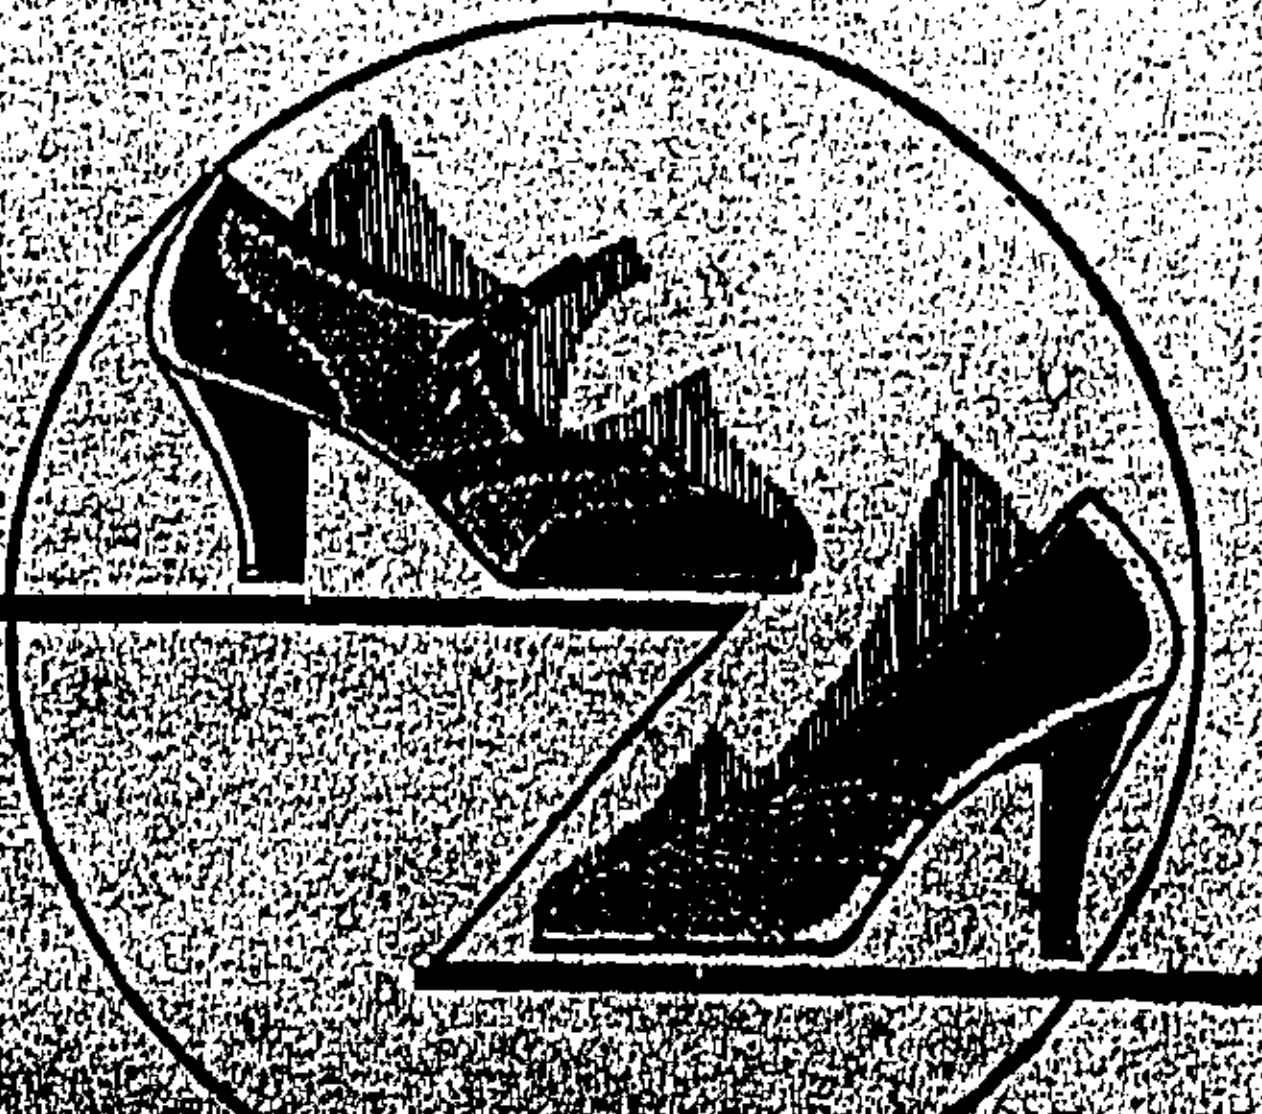

"Do you find that the large girls are speedy enough in the Post Office?" I asked an authority.

"We have had no complaints," he said.

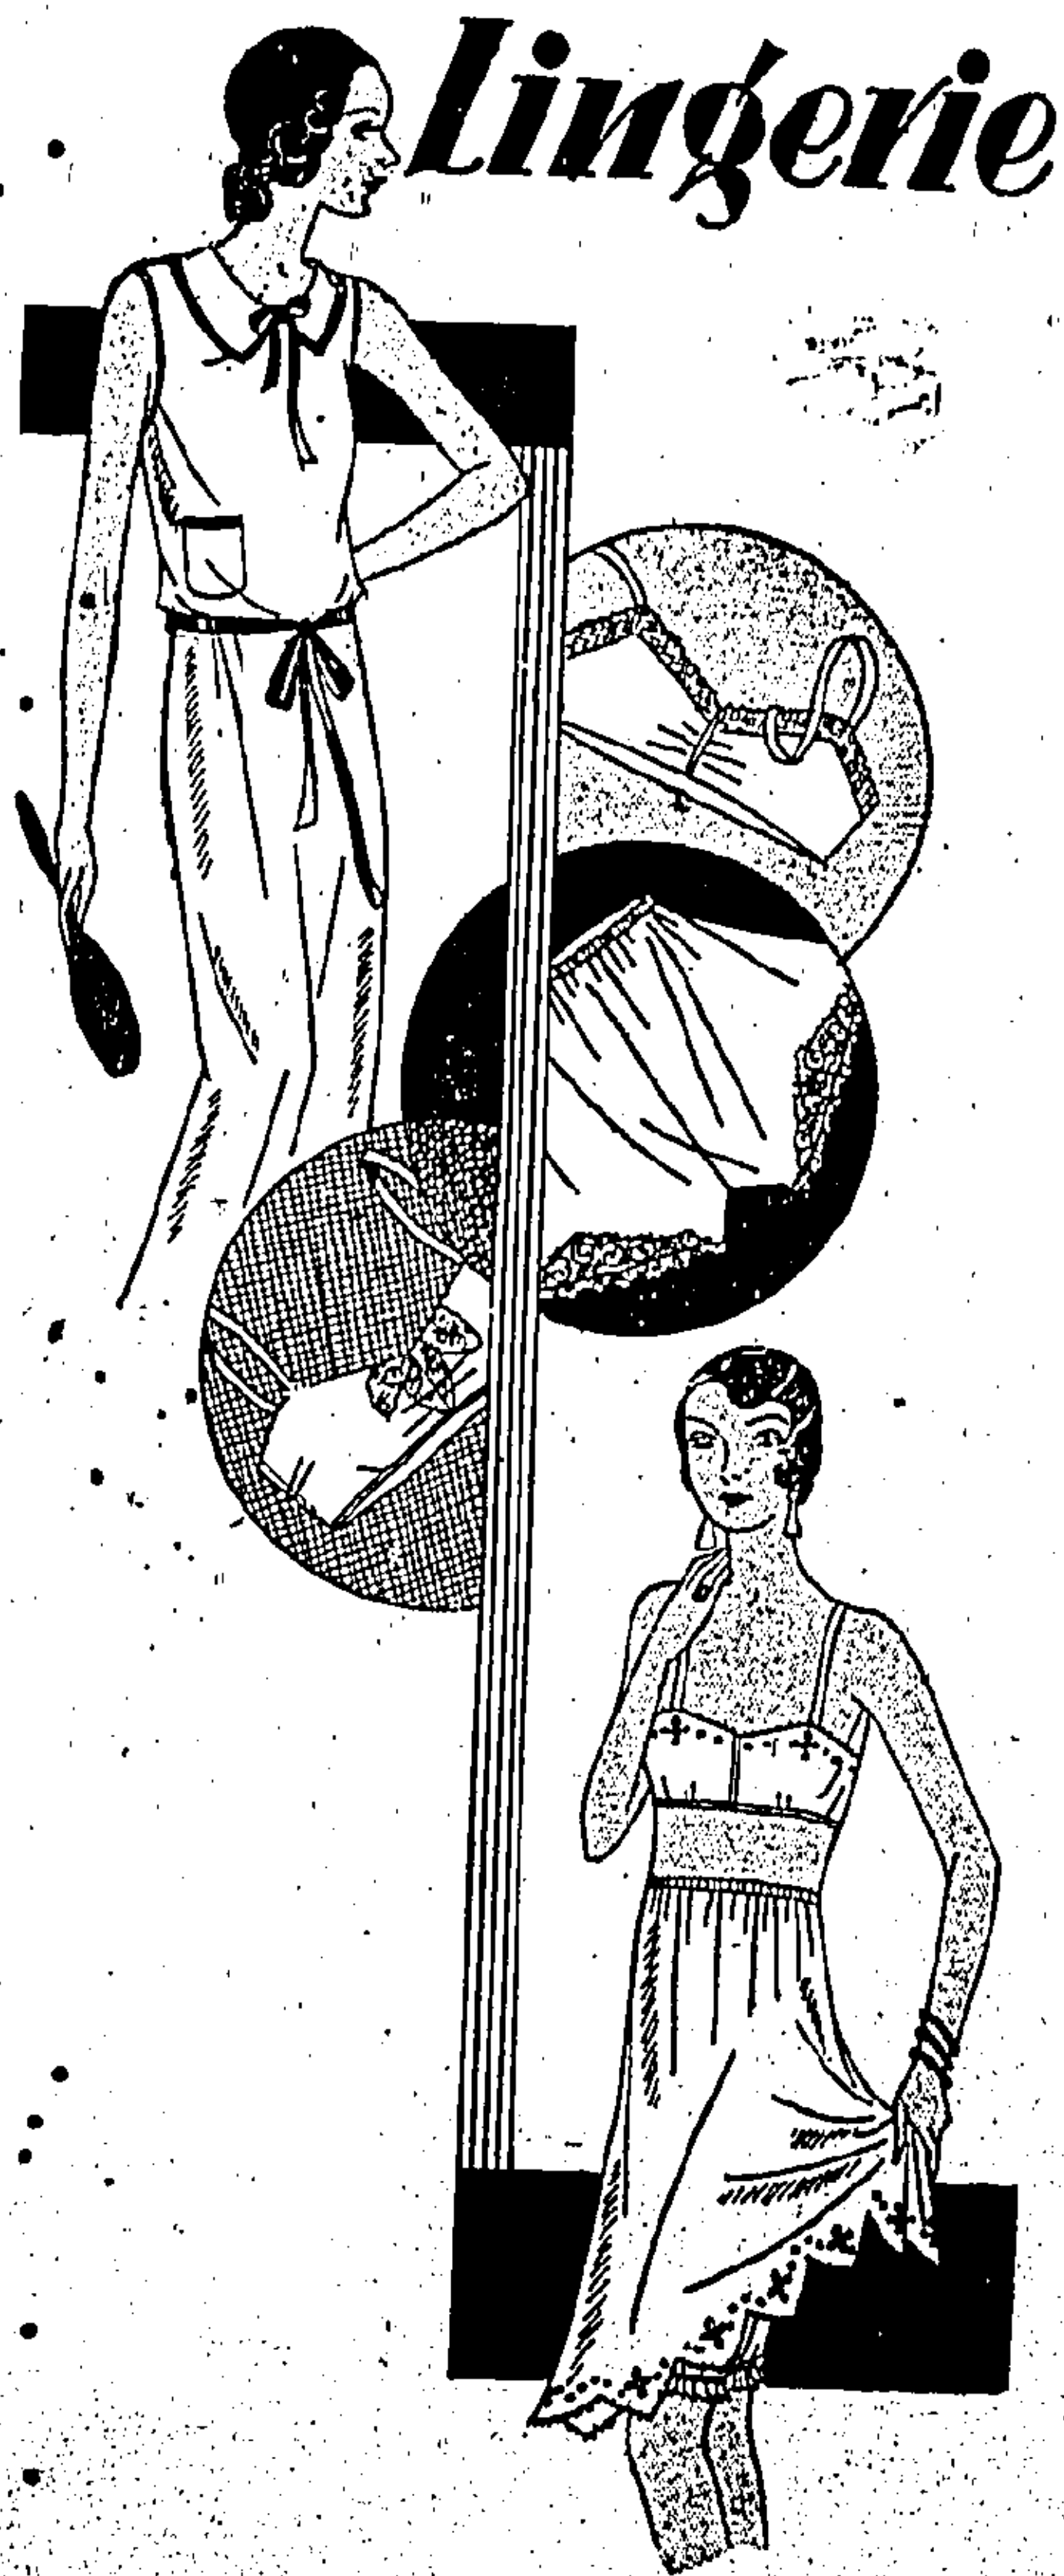

Whitehall does not care a rap about the burden of this too, too solid flesh. But then, Whitehall is not concerned very much about speed.

Just a last word. That City office chief whispered to me, when I left him: "We like our men to keep thin, too."

Milady's Shoes.

Lingerie

Slender feminine fashions that are ideal to wear under the new gazer's costumes. These sketched above in sheer silk crepe and dainty lace feature the new nightgown with Peter Pan collar, step-in with circular flare, petticoat-bloomer combinations and up-lift bandeau. In pastel colours trimmed with beautiful lace.

manufacturers have to follow the fashion, and are scarcely to blame," replied Mr. Street.

"If you state the features necessary for a House of Commons frock, Lancashire will speedily make the right thing at the right price."

TIRED FEET.

If tired feet are bathed first in hot water and then in cool water, thoroughly dried and pieces of juicy lemon placed on them, bandaged in position and left all night, they will be greatly relieved. The juice may be gently massaged into any tender spot, or any spot where a corn was formed or is forming.

STRANGE DEVICES IN "LUCKY STAR."

A WAR CRIPPLE.

Some of the material for Rubo Goldberg's "strange inventions" cartoon finds counterpart in the inventions of Charles Farrell, as Timothy Osborn when he returns from war a cripple in Frank Borzage's tenth production for Fox Film, "Lucky Star," a Movietone talker. Gadgets, devices and various crudely made "helps" for a man who lives alone and depends on a wheel chair for mobility, are to be seen in this grippingly human picture developed from Tristram Tupper's story.

Tim's home nestles in Poverty Hollow, a picturesque bit of "Down East," where the rail-fence lined road winds about through the hills. Nearby is a brook and from Tim's back door is stretched an endless rope around two pulleys, one on the kitchen casement and the other on the bank across the creek.

When Tim wants water he "sends" a bucket out on the endless rope, the bucket drops into the stream, and he pulls it up and reels it up to his door. This is but one of many inventions with which he has "modernised" the little home where much of his romance with Mary Tucker, Janet Gaynor's character, unfolds.

Hedwiga Leichter, Guinn Williams, Paul Fix and others complete the cast. Sonya Levien wrote the scenario.

"MISSISSIPPI GAMBLER"

Joan Bennett, who is now only eighteen years of age, has had one of the most rapid rises in the history of the screen. One of the most beautiful girls in pictures, she inherits her marked dramatic ability from her father, Richard Bennett, the famous stage and screen star.

Miss Bennett will be seen in the leading, feminine role opposite Joseph Schildkraut in "The Mississippi Gambler," his most recent, all-talking, Universal starring production which comes to the Queen's Theatre to-morrow. Other notables in the cast include Carmelita Geraghty, Alec B. Francis, Otis Harlan, and Billy Welsh.

CENTRAL THEATRE.

"The Return of Sherlock Holmes" Paramount's all-talking murder-mystery drama, with the noted British actor, Clive Brook, in the title role of Sherlock Holmes, which has been drawing packed houses to the Central Theatre, will have its final showing to-day, and those who like a good detective story should book their seats early for one of to-day's four performances. Tomorrow, Sunday, a new programme will be shown, the big picture is titled "Sweetie," an hilarious extravaganza of campus life, and will be shown for four days.

Nancy Carroll, the petite little red-haired cutie of the Paramount studios, who is rated by the film-going public as second only to Clara Bow in popularity, plays the title role in the production. Her leading man is Stanley Smith, lately seen and heard in "The Sophomore." Jack Oakie, the wise-cracking "fresh guy" comedian of "Fast Company" and many others; Helen Kane, baby-voiced singer who "hoopadoodled" her way to national fame overnight on phonograph and radio, and William Austin, beloved English comic actor of silent and talking films, are cast in support of Miss Carroll in singing, dancing and comedy roles.

The picture is all about prep school boys and girls and it is a tonic for the pep-hungry, a bracer for the music-lover. New, jazz-mad dances, new catchy tunes, new comedy "gags" and a great assortment of real American thrills makes this picture a veritable whirlwind of inspiring entertainment. If you miss it you are missing one of the biggest fun-thrills and music-fests of your career.

NANCY CARROLL'S ROLE.

Imagine the embarrassment of a chorus girl who inherits a boy's prep school. This is what happens to Nancy Carroll, Paramount's red-headed cutie, in the comedy-revue extravaganza, "Sweetie" which is showing at the Central Theatre to-day for a four days run.

According to the plot of the story, which was written by George Marion Jr., Miss Carroll is a show-girl who falls in love with a young football player at a famous Southern prep school. He has talents as a song-writer and she begs him to quit school and enter theatrical work but he will not listen, being imbued with school spirit to the exclusion of all else.

But Nancy is suddenly discovered to be the lost heiress-owner of the very school in which her boyfriend is the captain of the football team. Then the plot conflicts set in in earnest.

Although giving a class-room full of young football players an examination in English is not within the earlier experience of the vivacious Miss Carroll, being what a chorus girl is.

She began her chorine career by winning a local talent contest held in New York by one of the Loew theatres. She then joined the Passing Show of 1923. Within three weeks, she was graduated from the lineup to the leading feminine role, a little dancing specialty having paved her way to recognition.

Movies Via Stage.

When the company prepared to go on the road, Mrs. Carroll, who, like most mothers, was not enthusiastic for her daughter to go on the stage, told Nancy that she must remain in New York. Nancy stayed in New York, but appeared as Madame Du Barry, in a sketch featured by the Topics of 1923. The next year, she rejoined the Passing Show and had a dance specialty of her own. This was followed by a prominent part in "Mayflower," which opened at the Forest Theatre in New York.

The opportunity presented itself to Miss Carroll to come to California, so she came. Her first role in the west was in support of Nancy Welford in "Nancy." In November, 1926, she entered the Music Box show starring Fanny Brice.

Having noticed her work in reviews, Louis Macloon starred Miss Carroll in "Loose Ankles," which toured the Pacific Coast. After that came the leading role in "Chicago," produced in Los Angeles.

From stage work, Miss Carroll naturally gravitated toward pictures, getting her first big part with Paramount as the feminine lead in "Abie's Irish Rose" with Charles "Buddy" Rogers.

Appearing with her in "Sweetie" are Helen Kane, William Austin, Jack Oakie and Stanley Smith.

EASIER GOLF

by
H. STUART HOBSON.

WOMEN PLAYERS AND THE SNAP IN THE SWING.

USING THE WRISTS.

"Swing is not everything in golf," said a player of experience to me recently. "The experts can say what they like, but hit will always beat swing."

He instanced ladies' golf, and pointed to women players who swing in classic fashion—and longer than most men—and never get greater distance than 180 yards. I retorted by pointing to men players of vigour and physique who hit three times as hard as the average woman, but who do not get any distance worthy of the effort because they do not swing.

The truth is that the golf swing must always have an element of hit.

You can despatch a ball by swinging at it, and you can despatch it by hitting at it. You secure maximum distance, however, when you take a swing and add hit to it.

Lack of Momentum.

That is the great difficulty of the golfer who seeks to teach women players. They get the swing, but not the distance, and the reason is just lack of momentum at impact. It is difficult to convince a woman who has hit a good shot that she might have hit the ball twenty yards further had she made the club-head whistle a bit.

It is a fact that if you want to send the ball whistling down the fairway, you must have the club-head whistling at impact.

A careful examination of the technique of many women golfers will reveal that nearly all suffer from the same fault—until they find the way to remedy it.

The club is taken back well enough, with the light grip that the professional urges. The weight of the body goes back to the right foot, as it should. The trouble starts on the downward swing.

Almost invariably the club-head is dragged down by the weight of the whole body.

"Speeding Up."

The swing is long enough, but lazy. It lacks the snap that is secured when the left hand begins it and the right hand comes in just before impact. There is no intensive "speeding up" on the way down. The swing is shapely enough, but it just has not the punch that gets the distance.

Many players will say that this is because of a natural lack of strength in feminine wrists.

That is not so, however. Strength of wrists helps in getting at a buried ball with a niblick, but a child's strength of wrists should be sufficient to bring down the club-head of a suitably-weighted wooden club, and snap it through.

Too Heavy Clubs.

And now we have reached a vital point—the weight of the club.

The majority of women players, I have found, are using clubs that are far too heavy for them. Many even use clubs that are given them by husbands and brothers.

What happens? The club at the top of the swing feels too heavy. The downward movement is started by a pull of the body—it becomes, in fact, a tug instead of an easy movement of the wrists. All the evils of getting the body in first are then found: the club-head thumps the ground behind the ball, and at best distance is lost. At worst, the club-head bounces off the ground on the top of the ball, scuttling it. Nearly always, impact with the ground turns the lightly-gripped club in the hands, and the shot loses accuracy of direction even if it loses nothing else.

The Remedy.

The remedy for lack of distance is usually found in a lighter club, not in a heavier one.

A little lead taken out can make an amazing difference.

Once the habit of hitting the ground behind the ball can be mended, both accuracy and length improve. Accuracy improves because the head of the club is not turned by the ground, and distance is greater because none of the momentum of the hit is lost.

The secret is keeping the body out of it until you snap the right hand in. That means using a club that is sufficiently light, and starting it with the left hand.

Dipping the shoulder is a great mistake that many women make.

"Mashie Fright."

To get the idea of revolving the shoulders in the same plane by pivoting, they should watch the swing of a first-class player, then follow the movement in front of a mirror without the use of a club at first.

"Mashie fright" is a complaint from which many women suffer.

Most women putt well, but are seen at their very worst with chips shot from off the edge of the green. The reason for this is the old fault—hitting the ground behind the ball. The wrists are used in these mashie shots, and there is a minimum of pivot. The vital point is to get the club through, and to finish with it pointing to the pin. (China Mail Copyright.)

CRICKET THE BEST?

CLAIMS OF FOOTBALL, TENNIS, AND CLIMBING.

UNOFFICIAL DEBATE.

(By "Second Slip.")

It was an unofficial debate into which I unwittingly intruded—I had just dropped into the club for a few minutes, and had selected a table at which half a dozen people were seated. The topic, I soon discovered, dealt with sport in general. My interest in cricket, and I listened eagerly for the views of some supporter of that game. By the time the debate had closed, I had gained some knowledge of great interest which demanded intensive thought, concerning other games in the world of sport. Cricket, I now think, is not the only great game in this world.

I will endeavour to recall the statements made by the various sportsmen and place them before you. A Scotsman was speaking at the moment of my fortunate arrival. He claimed that the soccer "stars" of his native land had no rivals for all-round athletic ability, stamina and grit. These players, for whom prosperous English clubs were willing to pay thousands of pounds, were masters of the most difficult and most scientific of all games. They were participants in the great game from their youth upwards, and had now attained that high standard which is at once an art and a science.

Rugby Football.

There was a silence at the conclusion of his convincing speech, which was at last broken by the stentorian tones of a New Zealander. He agreed that Association football was a great game, but for ability, intellect and sheer stamina and grit, it faded before the powerful rays of Rugby football. It was the manliest game on the map, and the New Zealand "All Blacks" had attained such a pitch of excellence that English and other international clubs had adopted the methods of these magnificent players, thus revolutionising their own methods of play. Unlike soccer players, the Rugby player took part in the game as a hobby and not with a view to financial benefit.

The American had to have his say in the matter, and agreed with what the "Rugger" enthusiast had to say, but at the same time he said that tennis above all others in the wide world of sport took more out of a man. When two players of equal strength came into conflict in top knotch tennis—there was the test of endurance, of grit and of tenacity. It was admitted that for exercise, mental control and temperamental feelings lawn tennis stood unrivalled.

Alpine Climbing.

A larger pause attended this burst of enthusiasm, and I felt as if I should have to speak on behalf of cricket, but no, an elderly man cleared his throat and addressed the small gathering. He said that tennis players were as keen as they were fair, a credit to the courts that moulded them, but they knew not of the glories of Europe's best playground. The Swiss Alpine climber knew every inch of his beloved mountains. The man who climbed those peaks required nerves that would stand the strain, a clear thinking head upon broad shoulders and an indefatigable tread. The ideal of the climber was a missed catch at cricket, a missed smash at tennis meant certain death in this country of marvellous scenery, attainable only through indomitable pluck and steady and untiring progress.

His enthusiasm dazed me and carried me beyond the realms of cricket, so great was the zeal with which he described the participants of his chosen sport. I knew now that I could not combat his claims and sank back in my chair, only to lean forward eagerly as another person took up the challenge. He gave the air of a prosperous middle-aged business man, who, in spite of his years, had still retained a splendid athletic figure. I can remember his speech word for word. "Your climbers are a white-

GIRLS OF LONG AGO.

LAVINIA.

Lavinia lived in the year 1710, when Queen Anne was on the throne, and this is just one day in her life.

She rose at seven in the morning, washed her face and hands in a very small basin of cold water, and then put on a long blue silk gown over a very thick

"Lavinia... wore a blue silk gown over a very thick petticoat of quilted canvas which made the skirt stand out."

petticoat of quilted canvas which made the skirt stand out. The tight little bodice was nipped well in at the waist and finished round the neck with a lace frill.

Lavinia was fourteen, and she could read, write and play the harp; also she was learning to make the most delicious cordials.

At nine o'clock she went and made her curtsy to her mother who was drinking a cup of chocolate in bed, and while that lady was hoping that her daughter would be a good girl during the day the maid announced that Mr. Pippett, Lavinia's tutor, was in the study.

Lavinia curtsied to Mr. Pippett and hoped he was well. Then lessons began. Her tutor made her read out of a book, he gave her a music lesson, and he even instructed her to add up some household accounts.

Lavinia had dinner with her father and mother, but of course she did not speak till she was spoken to. In the afternoon, she went into the garden with her mother, and gathered white roses. They plucked the petals, placed them in a great bowl of water, on top of which floated a little square of toast with some yeast on it, and left the liquid to ferment.

As this was Lavinia's first attempt at making the white rose cordial her father loved, she could not sleep that night for excitement. So, in the dark, she ate some currant seed comfits, although these were intended to be taken in Church on Sunday to prevent her from coughing during the sermon—which lasted an hour.

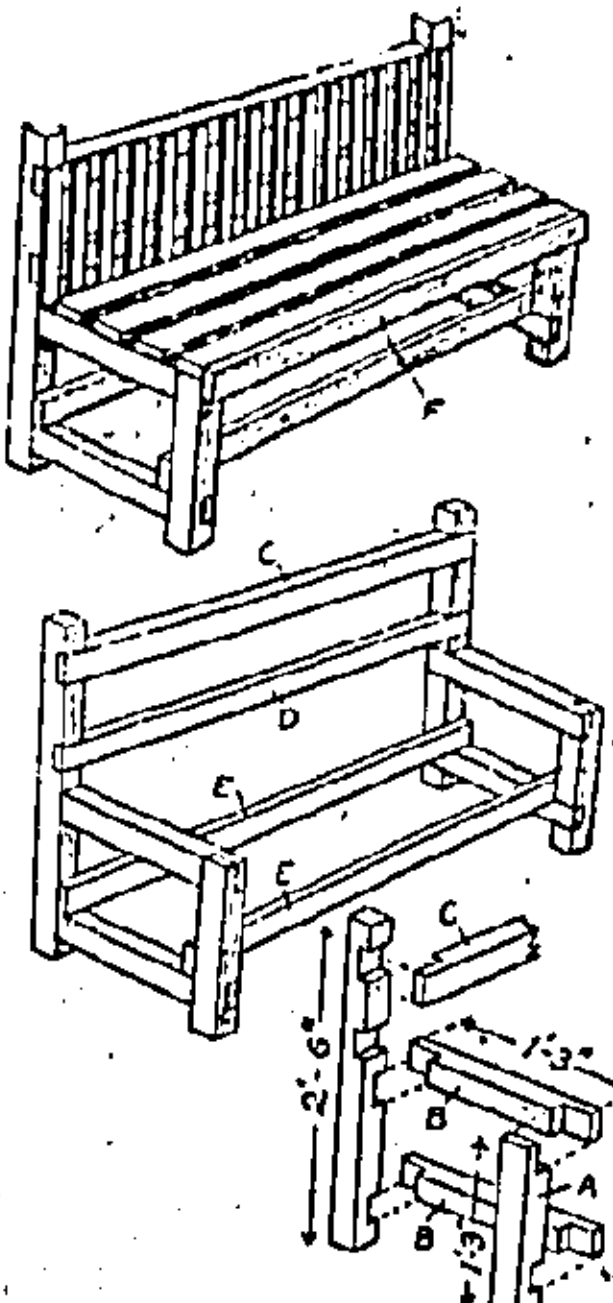

At last she fell asleep and dreamed that good Queen Anne had given her a lovely silver toothpick!

THE BILLY BOYS' WORKSHOP.

Making A Garden Seat.

A strong garden seat, like the one shown in the diagrams, can be made very cheaply from 2 in. by 2 in. quartering; pieces of 2 in. by 1 1/2 in. wood; and some lengths of 2 in. by 1 in. wood for the seat slats. A few laths of 1 in. by 1/4 in. wood will also be required for the back of the seat.

Make one of the side supports for the seat first. Saw off one piece of the 2 in. by 2 in. quartering, 2 ft. 6 ins. long; also three pieces each 1 ft. 3 ins. long. Take the long piece, which is the back leg, and with your pencil and try-square, mark out the positions of the four halved joints. Each slot, which is 2 ins. wide by 1 in. deep, is made by sawing down the lines to the required depth, and then removing the wood between with a chisel.

Carpenter tells you how to construct this useful garden seat; you cannot go wrong if you study the diagrams carefully.

The front leg, A, is halved at the top for a distance of 2 ins. and slotted at the bottom, 1 1/2 ins. from the end. The two cross pieces, B, are both halved at the ends as shown, and the four parts of the side support are then nailed together, as shown in the second diagram. Make the other side support in the same way, but be careful in marking out the two uprights to see that the slots for the cross pieces come on the inside.

The top back rail, C, is a piece of 2 in. by 2 in. wood, 3 feet long. It is halved at each end and nailed to the tops of the back legs. The bottom back rail, D, is of 2 in. by 1 1/2 in. wood, and the two cross-stays, E, are of 2 in. by 1 in. wood, each 3 ft. long; these are nailed inside the back and front uprights as shown in the second diagram.

For the seat, cut five 3 ft. lengths of 2 in. by 1 in. wood and nail the ends to the side supports as shown in the first diagram, so that the slats are equal distances apart. One of the slats, F, should be nailed across the front of the seat as shown.

Now, from some 1 in. by 1/4 in. laths, cut about 18 pieces, each 12 ins. long, and nail these, at a distance of 1 in. from each other, (Continued at foot of next Column.)

THE DRAGON AND THE DAISY CHAIN.

The land was inhabited by a terrible dragon! So strong was he that no one could kill him, and he did great damage. When he felt so inclined, he came down from the mountains into the streets and made off with everything he wanted in spite of all who tried to prevent him.

At last the king had an idea. "If someone will forge a tremendous chain," he said, "this can be flung over the dragon's head while he is in the streets, and then he can be kept chained up for ever. The person who captures the dragon shall be heir to my kingdom."

At once all the young men began to make chains—huge, thick, strong chains of iron and steel that it seemed impossible to break. Also when they were thrown over the dragon's head, he snapped them as if they had been strands of silk.

"Can nothing be done to destroy this monster?" cried the king.

Then his daughter, the lovely princess, went into the field, made a daisy chain, and waited for the dragon to appear.

Suddenly he rushed down the street, breathing fire. Quietly and fearlessly, the princess went up to him and asked him if he would be her friend and live at peace with them all.

"It depends on how you treat me," roared the dragon.

"Look what I have brought to capture you," smiled the princess, and, throwing the daisy chain over his head, she led him to the castle.

At the gates he pulled a little at the daisy-chain, and, looking round, the princess was astonished to behold a handsome young man.

"Princess," he said, "I was doomed to be a dragon till somebody showed me kindness instead of hate, and only you have done it. You have saved me!"

You can imagine the amazement of the princess—and you can guess the end of this story!

THE WIZARD.

He lives in a Tower
Right up in the sky,
Where no one can bother,
And no one may spy!
He's busy all day
With potions and pills,
For he is the Wizard
Who cures Fairy ills.

If a gossamer wing
Is torn during flight,
The Wizard's good plaster
Will soon put it right.
With magical charms,
And many a spell,
There's nothing he can't do
To make sick Elves well.

All day long he's busy,
Till night shadows grey
Chase swift o'er the sunset,
To wipe it away.
Then, wrapped in a mantle
Of spells and surprise,
The Wizard goes flying
Through star-patterned skies!

A BIRD'S NEST.

A bird's nest is really something to admire. The small builder has no tool, such as a knife, nail or bodkin. Neither has he any glue to join his work together. The only tool is his little beak. But still, the nest is always beautifully finished within and without.

What human, who has every implement and means of art, could build a nest like this bird?

to the cross pieces C and D, so that the tops of the laths come flush with the top edge of C.

After trying the seat to see that it is quite firm, give it a coating of dark green paint, and when quite dry, it will be ready to take its place in the garden.

A Dainty "Tea-Table Set."

A Tinkite wants to make a tea-cloth and half a dozen table napkins as a wedding-present for her big sister, so I hope she will like the set we are describing to you this week. It is just like the new set we have made for the Wendy Hut!

Choose linen in some pretty pale shade, like lavender, yellow, rose, green, or blue, and cut a piece about one yard square for the cloth. Turn in a small hem all the way round, sew it neatly, and then rule a line 1 1/2 inches in from the edge on each side of the cloth. Sew two lines of running stitches along this line, using coloured embroidery cotton, and making the stitches about a quarter of an inch long. A deeper shade of the cloth's colour will be pretty for this stitching—say coral on pale rose, buttercup on primrose, or purple on lavender.

Now draw a little bowl of flowers, like the one shown in Diagram A, in each corner of the cloth, marking round a six-pence to get the size of the flowers. Cut the bowl out of contrasting coloured material, tack it into place, and sew it on with backstitching.

A pretty tea-table set will make a splendid wedding-present for big sister. Dress-maker tells you how to fashion it from coloured linen.

Work the flowers in buttonhole stitch, using two or three different colours, and adding yellow satin stitch centres. Use green lazy-daisy stitches for the leaves, stem-stitches for the stems, three or four close buttonhole stitches for the buds, and green satin-stitches for the calyxes.

Make the table-napkins about 15 inches square, hem the edges and add a row of running stitches all round each as a border. Work a design like Diagram B, consisting of one flower and two buds, with leaves and stems, in one corner of each, and the set is finished.

SKIPJACKS.

In hot tropical countries, where there is plenty of sugarcane to supply it with food, there lives a wonderful beetle. It is called a skipjack, and has obtained this name from a marvellous acrobatic feat which, under certain conditions, it is able to perform.

Everyone, at some time or other, has seen one of our own beetles that has got turned on his back. There it lies, on the road or pavement, making frantic efforts to regain its natural position. With its legs in the air it struggles and wriggles, often with little success, and it might have to remain like that for a long time unless some kindly passer-by helped it to its feet.

Not so with the skipjacks. Should one of them happen to get overturned, it is provided with means of quickly getting over its difficulty. It immediately bends back the two extremities of its body, then, suddenly straightening itself again, it gives a little upward spring, turns a somersault, and comes down upon its feet! As it is springing it gives a click, which can clearly be heard, and for this reason it has been given another name, that of "clicking beetle."

But there is something still more wonderful about a skipjack. On each side of its thorax there is a little "lamp." Immediately anything touches the beetle these "lamps" become aglow with brilliant yellow light, and look just like the tiny lamps of miniature motor cars.

These "lamps" are not, as might have been expected, to help the skipjack to find its way in the dark. They were given it by nature as a certain means of startling and driving off enemies. How wonderful are the finest creatures made by God!

OUR SWEET-MAKING CORNER.

Coconut Creams.

Put one pound of granulated sugar into a saucepan with one teaspoonful of milk; put the pan on the stove and stir the contents gently. When the sugar has dissolved, boil the mixture for about five minutes; then draw the saucepan to the side of the stove, and stir in enough desiccated coconut to make a thick, creamy mass.

Stir well, and pat the cream together into a block in the saucepan. Then, using a spoon, take out little heaps and put them on greased paper to dry.

Half of this mixture may be coloured pink with cochineal, or brown with strong cocoa. The colouring should be stirred in while the cream is hot.

LIKE CIRCUS.

Why is "Sunbeams" like a circus?
Because it is full of chaff to make you laugh.
Why is "Sunbeams" like an octopus?
Because once it gets you, it won't let you go.

Mike: What fruit is red when it is green?
Pat: Nothing, of course!
Mike: Why, don't be silly—a blackberry.

Why do no girls cry on the last day of term?
Because they are too busy breaking-up to break down.

If you had no money on a wet day, why should you be glad if the barometer went up?
Because then there would be no change in the weather.

MAIL REVIEWS.

STRAIGHT FROM THE PUBLISHERS' OFFICES.

["Storm Over Europe," by Douglas Jerrold; Benn, 8/6 net.]

This is a story of love, war, and politics which takes as its background the struggle in progress in many European countries, e.g., Roumania, between the old and the new order of things. The theme is certainly topical, but the author's story prejudices can lead to only one conclusion—the triumph of monarchy and Roman Catholicism over republicanism and will of the wisp theories. As a story it is quite exciting in some parts and wearisome in others. The Prologue is a very clever and witty piece of writing, so are the next thirty or forty pages, but it is not until near the end, when we have swift action, that the author again reaches such a high level. One or two of the sayings are quite bright, and Cambridge men will enjoy the first sentences on page 24 where we have, "The function of Oxford in my time was to enable the upper classes to do without education. It succeeded admirably."

We imagine that Mr. Jerrold would do more brilliant work in historical and critical essays of the Guedalla type. He has a large vocabulary and an unusual gift of aphorism, and is obviously a man of wide reading. The Prologue of this book whetted our appetite, but the other courses, though good, were not up to the hors d'oeuvres.

KIPLING AGAIN.

["Rudyard Kipling," the story of a Genius, by R. Thurston Hopkins; Cecil Palmer, 5/- net.]

"Is Kipling a genius? Yes, a tremendous genius, there can be no doubt of that. He is a great artist who has risen in style without recourse to the imitation of the great writers of the past, by the single virtue of impetuous talent and innate gift," so writes R. Thurston Hopkins in the Biography of Rudyard Kipling.

The author admires all the works of one of our greatest living literary figures and maintains that the Scottish character, which Kipling inherits on his mother's side, has prevailed in shaping his philosophy.

To the lover of Kipling's works, this book should appeal, and those who have read and re-read "Kim" and "Puck of Pook's Hill," not forgetting the many other excellent volumes too numerous to mention here, will enjoy reading this delightful biography.

WILD IRISH BOY.

["Dennis Delivers the Goods," by Charles Haud; Cecil Palmer, 7/6.]

Dennis O'Dowd is an Irish boy who, owing to the death of his parents lives with an Uncle and Aunt in London. He is just a wild boy and apt, in common with all real boys to be mischievous. His main object in life is to be of help to his elders, but naturally prefers to help in his own way. In this book we have twelve episodes from his life describing his attempts to make life easier for others. Failure and the ridicule of his friends concern him but little, and Dennis must go down to history as a worthy companion of that other famous boy hero William whose adventures were published some time ago. Somehow Dennis isn't quite so convincing as William, but that may be on account of environment.

INDIAN SUPERSTITIONS.

["The Wishing Stone," by F. E. Penny; Hodder & Stoughton, 7/6.]

The latest book by Mrs. F. E. Penny will please many of her readers, but will not increase her public to any great extent. A regular green pendant worn by Daphne Fernandez, an Anglo-Indian is the Wishing Stone, and the ladies' faith in its powers intrigued Dick Dangerfield, a typical English squire who is travelling in India. He has had an unnecessary quarrel with his wife and leave England. Daphne, who claims to be psychic, soon makes Dangerfield feel that he should be, and the change from the sport loving gentleman to a keen student of the supernatural is very abrupt. The book works its way towards its inevitable end and one doesn't feel at all thrilled when Dick and his wife, Elaine, are reconciled. "The Wishing Stone" is merely a peg on which to hang a series of Indian superstitions.

"THE FORGOTTEN IMAGE."

["The Forgotten Image," by Eleanor Scott; Ernest Benn, Ltd., 7/6.]

The author of Randall's Round has given us another weird story, but one illustrating an entirely different type of weirdness. The life of a set of women in a Settlement in London is vividly portrayed, and the difficulties of running such an institution by no means over emphasised.

Allison Marshall, in an attempt to free herself from the thralldom of an over-indulgent mother, enters a settlement and lives with five or six other workers at Froblusher House. From the beginning her life becomes bound up with that of Beryl Chambers, a not too popular inmate. Beryl has a grudge against the world, but attempts to hide it in unnatural affability. She nearly succeeds in ruining Allison, but not quite. The book does not get at all tiresome in spite of its length but one could wish that the end was not such a terrible tragedy.

Miss Scott's reputation for really good work is enhanced by "The Forgotten Image."

BOOK FAIR.

How Italy Popularises Literature.

Rome, April 30. The annual Book Fair, which takes place simultaneously in all the principal Italian cities, has been fixed for May 4. This effort is to popularise a love of reading and to promote the sale of Italian books, first organised four years ago by a group of authors, has now become one of the most successful features of each recurring spring. The rows of decorated stalls set up in some central street or square, piled high with good literature at moderate prices, invariably attract large crowds.

This year the Fair in Florence, the chief centre of the Italian book trade, is to have a new feature in a small motor-train of books, which will pass through the city, taking in the suburbs, to convey the attraction of the printed word to those who may not be able to attend the Fair.

ROUND THE CAMP FIRE

GUIDING IN U.S.A.

The girl Scout movement, as it is called in America, has been steadily growing during the last few years. There are now about one million girls in America who have benefited by scout training, and their numbers are increasing every month. One of the strongest points in American Girl Scout training is its joyous, well-ordered celebration of the great traditional feast days. May day and other quaint and lovely folk festivals were almost lost in America until the Girl Scouts began to celebrate them again.

Another of the Girl Scouts' innovations is a series of "historical hikes." In them are combined the joys of gipsying, camping, adventuring, and learning something about their own country. Troops of Girl Scouts set out in a motor caravan of two or three cars to see the world, covering some fifteen hundred miles of new country in a fortnight at the cost of about 10 dollars. (about £2).

American Girl Scouts have another new scheme which they call "the little house." In the "little house," which may be anything from a log cabin to an entirely modern club house, the Girl Scouts spend their time "playing at home," a thing impossible in the modern American home. There the Girl Scouts plan furnishing, practice cooking, sew on the sewing-machine, make curtains and cushions, and hold all their meetings, receiving at the same time a genuine education in house management.

WAGGON TURNED TURTLE.

How Boy Scouts went to the rescue of an Ox Waggon in South Africa is told in the following letter received by the Boy Scout Headquarters.

"George and Dudley" are the writer's young nephews, and she has been describing an out-of-the-way seaside place much frequented by families and campers of all sorts during the summer holidays in December.

"To this seaside place on the East Coast of South Africa every year come Guides and Scouts in hundreds from different parts of the District, all under canvas. Very ship-shape and handy they are, and a wonderful useful crowd."

Just the other day, from our steep, we saw a huge ox-waggon crawling over the slant of a sand-hill, suddenly "turn turtle"—wheels whirling in the air, oxen struggling to keep their balance, and all the packed crowd of men, women, and children chuckled out and rolling down the hill. It really was a funny sight, though naturally a hair-raising one too, especially as a baby of the party was buried under the waggon.

But in a few minutes there was a whole heap of Scouts on the scene! Where did they come from? I just saw young George and Dudley fly from some where, and soon the Scouts were fishing out the baby quite unhurt, picking up and comforting the children, and presently, when every one was safe and sound, the youngsters set to try to right

AMERICAN WOLF CUBS.

The United States, which established the Boy Scout movement a year after it had been initiated in England, has only just adopted the Wolf Cub section. It was enabled to make a beginning on the 20th anniversary of its Boy Scout movement by the generosity of Mr. Clarence Howard, president of the St. Louis Boy Scouts' Council, who gave $2,000 to enable Wolf Cubs or Junior Boy Scouts to be commenced. The Wolf Cubs branch of the Boy Scout movement was inaugurated in England, the birthplace of the world scout movement, in 1916 for boys of 8 upwards, too young to become Boy Scouts. To-day there are 208,160 Wolf Cubs in the British Empire. The American decision to adopt Wolf Cubs comes in response to a widely expressed desire by parents and schools that the character training of the Scout Movement should be made available to the smaller boy. Three years of research work by the American National Council have preceded the actual starting the heavy waggon. And they did it too, yet how, I'm still wondering!

Imagine a steep, slithering sand-hill of loose, white sand, without a bush or reed for support, a tremendous heavy waggon flat on its tummy and these boys, with their staves levering it right-side up, and all in so short a space of time. The oxen were insinuated, folk re-packed and off went the laughing crowd intact, while the Scouts, their good deeds done, disappeared into nothingness again. Young George and Dudley came home to find an interrupted dinner, so perhaps the others were doing the same. But how did they know they were needed? They just came running from every where. Three cheers for the Scouts, say I!"

FIJI SCOUT REWARDED.

The Silver Cross with the Bar and Certificate has been presented by the Chief Scout, Lord Baden-Powell, to Rover Leader Ilatia Makaba, of the 2nd Davulava Group of Boy Scouts in Fiji. The double award, which has been sent for presentation to His Excellency the Governor at Suva, has been made to Rover Leader Makaba for two acts of gallantry. In November, 1927, he swam out into the flood waters of the Rewa River, and rescued two Fijian children from drowning, the two children having been engulfed by the flood. A year later, in November, 1928, Makaba at great personal risk, stopped a runaway horse at Nansori. Having secured the horse, Makaba went back to find the Indian driver of the buggy. Finding him on the roadway, Makaba then rendered first aid to the injured man.

A GENTLEMAN.

There have been many definitions of a gentleman. One of the most satisfying is Bernard Shaw's: "A man who always tries to put in more than he takes out." This can be applied to all circumstances of our lives. In our occupations, we are trying to give good value for our wages or fees? In our friendships, do we think more about what we can do for others than about what we can get them to do for us? In our religious, do we aim at making things better for everybody, or are we intent merely upon saving our own souls? Even if certain folks show him no courtesy, a gentleman behaves pleasantly to them. He is more concerned with his contribution to social amenity than with their social amenity to him. He is not a selfish man. He is a gentleman. "Do good to them that despitefully use you," is another way of "The Old Scout's" Column.

The culminating joy of Scouting is camping. In camp, a Scout has the inspiration of bush, mountains, rivers, lakes and seas, studying the woodman's craft, campaigning, tracking and camp life.

The arts and crafts bring forth a desire to work with the hands and create original things. He learns to live in harmony with other boys; a co-ordination of mind and muscle in sport and games; the meaning of self-reliance, courage, discipline, fair play and true sportsmanship, of trying to see things from the other fellow's point of view.

Camping presents a fine opportunity for nature study—the realisation of the wonders of creation; seeing the grandeur of the sunrise and the sunset; and hiking "mid scenes of beauty far from the beaten track. If a camp be near the water, aquatic sports can be indulged in—as swimming, boating and fishing; and life-saving can be practised.

Camping is not all play. There are tasks to be done, but they are done cheerfully, and work becomes a pleasure. Camp's main asset is the happy atmosphere which pervades every corner every hour of the day and night.

Cool nights under the stars awaken in him a great love of nature. In lighter vein, around the camp fire he entertains. He faces the firelights with the utmost confidence. All Scouts are star performers under the stars. The glow of the camp fire lights up the heart of the Scout.

the Scout songs echoing among its vastnesses are things never to be forgotten.

An easily erected and a novel cheap camping tent was invented in 1926 by a British scout.

There are no poles to it, and it can be pitched in half a minute. The front and rear of the tent are supported with "A" shaped shearlegs. Those legs are hinged at the top and again half-way down, so that they fold into a small compass. The hinged portions are furnished with small side supports.

The legs are attached to the tent so that the whole thing folds up together. Only two pegs—one at the back and one at the front—are used, the four shearlegs forming pegs themselves.

To pitch the tent, it is placed, folded, on the ground, and the rear peg, which is fixed to a guy rope attached to the top of the shearlegs, is driven into the ground. The pegged down, and the tent is pitched.

On most camp sites, there is sure to be some tree stumps that can be utilised in a dozen different ways. Here is one example:—

Choose a nice fat stump (not too far from the tents, and close to the water), and hollow it out so that a basin will rest in the top. Then drive two pegs into the side of the stump, and another peg into the opposite side, for the soap, tray, and towel.

The esteem in which Scouts are held in Britain is proved by the frequency with which one sees in the newspapers advertisements of employment for boys with a stipulation that applicants must have been members of a Scout troop for three years. Some people declare that they are not worth anything

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK.

"The fellow who lacks ginger is always looking for a snap."

a disposition to foster the "militaristic spirit, but the 'Newcastle Chronicle,' commenting on the subject, says: "Obedience and ability to understand as well as to carry out instructions are the first essentials of successful business—and are taught in the Scouts. Since the evil of unemployment has created almost as great an evil—too much compulsory idleness—membership of this organisation, whose activities and social services are known the world over, is a standard by which an employer may judge."

Some time after the formation of the Girl Guides, the Boy Scouts had been formed, Sir Robert Baden-Powell formed the movement of Girl Guides. He is now the chairman both of the Guide Council and the Executive.

Lady Baden-Powell is Chief Guide, whilst Princess Mary holds the office of President. The aim of the Girl Guide movement is to develop good citizenship among girls by forming their character. It is also for the purpose of inculcating thoughtfulness for others and joyousness in the hearts of the girls, besides training them in habits of observation and self-reliance. Physical development is promoted, and Guides are taught how to be useful to others. Useful crafts are taught in the companies, thus bringing older and younger girls together to work as sisters. Having made the Guide promise, a girl is eligible to all the rights of the organisation, and she then belongs to a huge sisterhood claiming some thousands of members.

Mangin.

THRILLS AT WIMBLEDON.

London, Yesterday.
The tennis matches at Wimbledon to-day were graced by the presence of T.H. the King and Queen. The Royal visitors watched the games on the centre court, where a series of international struggles took place, amongst which British-American matches predominated.

The young American, Gregory Mangin, defeated one of Britain's big hopes, "Bunny" Austin, after a terrific struggle, 9-7, 10-8, and 6-0. Allison, of America, one of the pair who won last year's doubles, beat the British Davis Cup player, Hughes, 4-6, 6-1, 6-2, 6-3.

In the Ladies' Singles, Miss Helen Jacobs, of America beat Mrs. List easily 6-0, 6-1, and in Mixed Doubles an Australian-American partnership in Crawford and Miss Ryan proved too good for the British pair, O. G. N. Turnbull and Mrs. Hill, winning 6-3, 6-8. This match was in the second round.

Other results were:—
Women's Singles—4th Round.
Mrs. Wills-Moody (America) beat Fraulien Canters (Holland) 6-0, 6-1.

Men's Singles—4th Round.
John Doe (America) beat David (Britain) 6-3, 6-3, 6-1.

CHICAGO TRUCE.

GANGS COMBINE TO COMBAT
THE POLICE ONLY.

Gang warfare in Chicago's notorious underworld has been halted by the most bizarre "disarmament treaty" on record.

Meeting at a conference in an hotel on the south side of the city, the rival gangster chiefs, "Scarface" Al Capone and "Bugs" Moran, signed a peace treaty dividing Chicago between them for lawless purposes, and agreeing to abandon the use of their armaments and forces in battling with each other.

Under this agreement Capone's gangsters will in future operate only in the western section of the city, and part of "The Loop," while Moran and his men will take toll in the northern quarters. Thus they will only need sufficient

EXTORTIONIST SHOT.

Shanghai, June 13.
Charged with manslaughter, King Shen-chong and Koo Kuo-an, lieutenant and sergeant of the Volunteer Corps, Nantao, were brought before Judge Wu in the Shanghai District Court on Saturday.

The action is the result of the shooting of an alleged extortionist. Mr. Chen Yu-liang, South Gate, Nantao, had always received anonymous letters demanding a large sum of money and threatening him with bodily harm. The letter also instructed Mr. Chen to put the money, wrapped with newspaper, in a certain spot in front of Chen Teh School.

On receiving the ultimatum notice Mr. Chen reported the matter to Captain Ma Wen-dah of the 7th Group of the Volunteer Corps, Nantao, and asked for help. A squad of armed officers headed by King Shen-chong and Koo-Kuo-an were immediately despatched to the scene. Disguised as hawkers and coolies the volunteers watched carefully.

Shortly after the trap had been arranged, the officers saw a man wearing a black gown step on to the scene and pick the paper wrapped parcel which was put on the stone step before the school by the volunteers. The hawkers and coolies suddenly turned out to be officers and ordered the man to stop. On refusal, the man put his hand into his pocket as if he intended drawing a pistol. But Koo fired a shot, before the man could take his hand out of his pocket, which knocked him down. The man was immediately arrested and was found to be named Lee Chung-hua, sand and gravel contractor.

Claiming that he is a bona fide citizen and that he is innocent of the matter Lee Chung-hua brought a criminal action against the two officers in the District Court.

In court on Saturday the plaintiff produced the doctor's certificate and said that he has sustained heavy damage from the shot, bodily and economically.

When questioned by the court both accused said that they fired the shot because they saw the plaintiff was about to draw his gun when they requested him to stop. They further said that Lee is the man who wrote the anonymous letter as the handwriting in it is similar to that of an account book which is kept by him. The account book was then produced.

After a lengthy hearing the case was adjourned for one week pending further investigation.

Li Ling (23), a coolie employed at the Green Island Cement Company's works at Hunggham, received internal injuries yesterday afternoon through a number of bags of cement falling on him whilst he was assisting in loading them on a lorry. He was taken to the Kwong Wah Hospital.
